Dear Parent(s) / Guardian(s),

Date... 12/16/2013...

This letter is to inform you that your student, Tyler Shelter, has been doing a remarkable job in his/her Human Anatomy and Physiology class. To date, there have been 61 assignments, not including lecture notes, quizzes and tests. Your student has completed 100% of this work. This is not an easy task. In fact, it requires great dedication, commitment, perseverance, and most of all, great study skills. Your student's work ethic is admirable and should be acknowledged, complimented and / or rewarded.

Some "possible" rewards include:

1. a new or late model used car is extravagant, but is guaranteed to keep motivating
2. a new laptop, preferably a "Mac Book" is an excellent idea and very generous
3. a new desktop, preferably an "Air Mac" is a great motivator as well
4. $ 500 or if money is tight (which is the case for most of us) a $ 100 gift card to Best Buy or a crisp one hundred dollar bill is a very classy possibility
5. a new iPad II would be very lavish
6. however a used iPad or iPad II would also be appreciated
7. a new cell phone, preferably the updated "iPhone 5" is a "wow- brag to my friends" reward
8. with the iphone 5, unlimited text and data (as you are already aware, voice minutes are unnecessary since students believe that talking on the phone is outdated and low tech—now, it's all about texting, texting and more texting, especially in school).
9. let them download 100 songs or 100 ringtones of their choosing
10. a completely new winter wardrobe is a marvelous choice for the young ladies
11. a new gaming system, Xbox 360, Playstation 3 or Nintendo Wii would be a special treat
12. gaming accessories like a "Kinect" for Xbox 360 or a "Board" for the Wii system are always treasured and guarantees continued academic success
13. Sharp's new 80 inch LED-LCD 3D HDTV and, of course, with a satellite hookup for their bedroom (I know your student would really love a wall mounted unit), it would be treasured for years.
14. a new 3D Blue-Ray 1080p DVD player is never a poor choice a new skateboard, bicycle or other similar item is a great way to express your excitement.
